IN MEMORIAM

IN MEMORIAM
In loving memory of our husband and father, William I. Ayers, who passed away one year ago, May 16, 1956.
In our sad hours of memory,
We sit and think of how you
Suffered and died.
Deep in our heart still lies
The longing and heartaches,
Of the one who had to suffer so hard.
Little knows of the heartaches,
And the tears that still we shed,
Although God knew his suffering.
And called you home to rest.
—Sadly missed by wife and Children.

Wheat Allotment Plan For New Growers

Farmers on land on which no wheat was seeded for grain for any of the years 1955, 1956, and 1957, may apply for a 1958 wheat acreage allotment, according to C. D. Lewis, Chairman of the Appomattox County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Committee. To be considered for an allotment on a farm which had no wheat seeded for grain for any of those years, the farmer must apply in writing to his county ASC committee by July 1, 1957.

Blank application forms are available at the ASC county office for use in filing requests for allotments.

A rising tide of visitors, yet far from its crest, is pointing to rapid build-up of what Virginia can do with its historical and scenic attractions. A check here at Appomattox, reveals that already this Jamestown Festival Year, the number of visitors is running well ahead of previous years. This indicates that 1957 will set new volume records.

All this week at Old Appomattox Court House, the school buses were rolling up and unloading students who came to visit the spot where Lee and Grant made Peace in 1865. The total will likely be well over 500 students this one week. This follows heavy visitations in April and early May. On April 9, Peace anniversary date, over 1,500 visiting students came to the Old Court House, and on May 8 attendance at the National Park area set a record. Visitations in between these events have been heavy, due in part to the number of Jamestown Festival guests touring the state, and unofficial estimates are that already attendance at Old Appomattox is running some 5,000 ahead of last year.

Meanwhile, attention is being directed to the over-all plans for the one-hundredth anniversary of the Civil War, to be observed four years from 1961 to 1965.

The New York Times last Sunday featured an article on plans for the Centennial of "Our Greatest Moment." A joint resolution to create a 100th anniversary observance committee has been introduced in Congress. Senators Levertt Saltonstall, James O. Eastland and Barrygolder are sponsors in the Senate of this resolution.

Hearings on a companion resolution in the House opened on Monday of this week, with an impressive list of non-partisan witnesses. The list of witnesses included Maj.-Gen. Ulysse S. Grant, III, retired, a grandson of the victorious general of 1865, and also representatives of the Sons of Confederate Veterans.

Under the resolution now before Congress, a Civil War Centennial commission would be set up now. It would have four Senators, four Representatives, eight members from the general public, and the Director of the National Park Service. The President, Vice - President and Speaker of the House would be ex officio members.

The National Park Service has a major role in the plans for the Centennial of the Civil War. Locally, it has promised that the complete restoration of the Old Appomattox Court House village will be ready at least by April 9, 1965, maybe sooner.

Featured in the plans for 1961-65 is the theme of "not stirring up old hatreds out of the past," but rather using the Centennial as an approach to true national unity and display of progress through internal peace.

That Appomattox should and will be featured in this Centennial is generally admitted, but just how is a problem sooner or later to be faced at the local level as well as by those who will make up the Centennial Commission for the entire observance in the nation. The fact that Congress is even now planning to set up this Commission indicates that long-range planning is necessary. Also the National Park Service has made its plans on a ten-year basis which got moving last year.
